GTF certificate programs are graduate-level study opportunities open to individuals who hold a bachelor's degree and have a minimum five years of involvement (paid or volunteer) in ministry or social service. The GTF defines ministry as "service to the improvement and nurture of society and the world community." Practitioners involved in ministry are self-reflectively aware of the nurturing quality of that activity, and are found in such fields as education, pastoral care and counseling, chaplaincy, mediation, psychology, health care and counseling, sacred music, religious education and other cognate fields.
